ABSTRACT

In a method and system for collecting data from remote terminal units using the Internet, each remote terminal unit is connected to an Internet-ready communication module having an Internet-like client running thereon. The Internet-like client provides the communication protocols and procedures to allow direct, bearer service and network independent communication between the communication module and an Internet server.

5